MMS Students to Perform in Times Square

April 15, 2007 - Three Mason Middle School students will share their talents with New Yorkers to communicate a message of hope and healing through the language of dance. MMS seventh graders Ashley Bradley, Courtney Brackman and Sarah Dent will join about 400 other dancers who are gathering in New York for the sixth annual Project Dance event from April 20-22nd in Times Square.

Project Dance was born out of a desire to serve the people of New York directly after the events of September 11th and it has managed to do just that. Each year thousands of New Yorkers stop to watch the concert held on a temporary stage on the corner of 44th Street and Broadway.

Although the weekend is designed to give participants the opportunity to perform and take dance classes, Project Dance also strives to inspire dancers as artists and individuals. All of the activities over the weekend focus on faith and personal growth.

About Project Dance

Project Dance is a movement of dancers seeking to positively impact culture through artistic integrity. It offers training, education, and performance opportunities for dancers worldwide who desire to dance with integrity to inspire. Go to www.projectdance.com for more information.
